Notes: 10/31 to Erin:

3. I received a school notice that Lucy was absent on 10/30. Lucy told me she was taken out for a therapy appointment that ultimately did not occur. I'm concerned about missed school. Please confirm:

- The date/time of the appointment,
- The provider's name,
- Whether it was canceled or rescheduled, and
- The new date/time if rescheduled.

As a reminder, please provide me advance notice of medical/therapy appointments and include me in communications with providers. Thank you for confirming the above and for accepting the 11/12 visit. I look forward to seeing Lucy, Sam, & Simon.

Erin's response (relative to this matter, it's quoted from a longer message):

Lucy's academic and attendance records speak for themselves. Concerns about her checking out a few hours early are misplaced. She did not have a scheduled appointment today, but has had a busy stressful week, and obviously benefitted from the little break. I did call Breakthroughs at 1:16 pm, right after I checked Lucy out of school. I spoke with Fabiola, who made an appointment for Lucy to see Monica December 4 at 5:00 pm. As always, Breakthroughs will include you in the text thread when confirming the day before the appointment.

- 9:00AM to 10:00AM Erin claimed Lucy "didn't want to speak with me" and blocked calling in OFW to prevent my calls from coming through. When I did eventually get Erin to enable calling she enabled audio only. Lucy sounded completely normal with regards to her disposition towards me. These actions prompted me to worry about the situation over there as Erin's prior attempts to conceal what was happening at her house proceeded Lucy's last hospitalization. This prompted me to reach out to the social investigator and my then attorney raises my fears with them, and sure enough mere days later Lucy was again hospitalized.

9:00AM to 10:00AM Thanksgiving; Lucy placed at Mental Health Resource Center Jacksonville; Occured late at night after we had a normal phone conversation. Erin was persistently unwilling to share with me the specifics of what led up to the hospitalization, claiming only vaguely that Lucy had "extreme anxiety".
