Notes: 10/31 to Erin:

3. I received a school notice that Lucy was absent on 10/30. Lucy told me she was taken out for a therapy appointment that ultimately did not occur. I'm concerned about missed school. Please confirm:

- The date/time of the appointment,
- The provider's name,
- Whether it was canceled or rescheduled, and
- The new date/time if rescheduled.

As a reminder, please provide me advance notice of medical/therapy appointments and include me in communications with providers. Thank you for confirming the above and for accepting the 11/12 visit. I look forward to seeing Lucy, Sam, & Simon.

Erin's response (relative to this matter, it's quoted from a longer message):

Lucy's academic and attendance records speak for themselves. Concerns about her checking out a few hours early are misplaced. She did not have a scheduled appointment today, but has had a busy stressful week, and obviously benefitted from the little break. I did call Breakthroughs at 1:16 pm, right after I checked Lucy out of school. I spoke with Fabiola, who made an appointment for Lucy to see Monica December 4 at 5:00 pm. As always, Breakthroughs will include you in the text thread when confirming the day before the appointment.

- 9:00AM to 10:00AM Erin claimed Lucy "didn't want to speak with me" and blocked calling in OFW to prevent my calls from coming through. When I did eventually get Erin to enable calling she enabled audio only. Lucy sounded completely normal with regards to her disposition towards me. These actions prompted me to worry about the situation over there as Erin's prior attempts to conceal what was happening at her house proceeded Lucy's last hospitalization. This prompted me to reach out to the social investigator and my then attorney raises my fears with them, and sure enough mere days later Lucy was again hospitalized.

■ 9:00AM to 10:00AM Erin's explanation (one day sprained ankle): Lucy twisted her ankle while walking at 7:45 pm on Wednesday (yesterday). She has not been evaluated by a medical provider. She can bear weight enough to walk, but not enough to walk with a normal gait.

She does not desire to attend school with accommodations, so she will stay home and continue RICE treatment if she is still in significant pain tomorrow, and return to school on Monday, January 12. Her preference will be to attend school tomorrow, if she can do so comfortably. I'll let you know in the morning what she decides.

■ 9:00AM to 10:00AM Erin's explanation (this is the appt where she lied to the doctor about Lucy's supposed "prior diagnoses"): Lucy chose to work on make-up assignments from last Thursday this morning, as she knew she would not miss significant instruction in her morning classes.

Lucy chose to go to the pediatrician this afternoon, since she had not yet done a follow-up since her inpatient stay. The practitioner recommended 30 minutes of physical activity daily, and put in a referral with Angel Kids' psychiatric department for further care coordination/recommendations.

- 9:00AM to 10:00AM Lucy Excused (Other) – 5th through 7th Period
- 9:00AM to 10:00AM This was Lucy's first appointment at "Puzzle Peace Counseling" which Ms. Schreiber did not consult me about her attending despite my earlier efforts to coordinate care. Oddly – they specialize in treatment of autism which Lucy has not been diagnosed with.

- 9:00AM to 10:00AM Her Explanation: Lucy stayed home to complete a major project for her online class, which has a heavier workload than her in-person classes. She's doing extremely well academically, and I supported her doing this.
- 9:00AM to 10:00AM Lucy – Unexcused
- 9:00AM to 10:00AM My note: Lucy has a free period every single school day to complete work for this class Ms. Schreiber is referring to.

- 9:00AM to 10:00AM Her first note: Lucy stayed home from school again today.
- 9:00AM to 10:00AM Her second note (!): I'm not sure why she stayed home. But she went to school today, and is doing well academically. The appointment was a referral from Lucy's pcp to begin evaluation by Dr. Ruiz. After Thursday, they'll send questionnaires for parents and possibly teachers, and then schedule her actual evaluation for sometime in March.

- 9:00AM to 10:00AM Erin unblocked Lucy's phone from contacting me to send me a text message. Her blocking of the phone violates the courts order and has been ongoing since shortly after the "emergency". Doing so in this context specifically placed Lucy in the middle of what should have been an adult matter – which she's falsely accused me of doing repeatedly.
- 9:00AM to 10:00AM Note from Ms. Schreiber: Lucy needs appropriate care right now. Her therapist needs data now. I'm sure Dr Ruiz is capable of collecting relevant information and broader context, and giving accurate attributions. It is will be for the purpose of getting Lucy the care she deserves. It is a comprehensive psych eval. Lucy is a highly intelligent, capable, teenager, and she is self-advocating for this, having spoken to a psychiatrist, pediatrician, and therapist.

The social investigation will only include psych exams for the parents, not for Lucy, and it is meant to make custody recommendations to the court; not to make treatment recommendations to Lucy's therapist.

Can we at least let her do the intake part tomorrow?
